Making California Great Again

Recognizing Divine Providence

At the 1787 Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia, Benjamin Franklin acknowledged and emphasized the significance of Divine Providence.

The longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid? We have been assured, Sir, in the Sacred Writings, that 'except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.' ... I therefore beg leave to move that henceforth prayers imploring the assistance of Heaven and its blessings on our deliberations be held in this Assembly every morning before we proceed to business, and that one or more of the clergy of this city be requested to officiate in that service.

~ Benjamin Franklin

We, the people of the State of New California, have united to establish a new state and to restore the State of California. We appeal to Heaven for help and invoke Divine Providence to guide us in this grand undertaking. We recognize the hand of God acting on our behalf and humbly acknowledge and offer our gratitude to Almighty God for His guidance in this endeavor.

Reorganized California

The State of California no longer follows its original Constitution, which was a compact established with the Union of States in 1849. California abandoned the compact completely in 1879 when it adopted a set of corporate bylaws, thereby creating a corporation that, as a result, invalidated the original compact and adopted a government that is neither binding nor lawful.

The people of California have a way to overcome this by following the framework established in the United States Constitution. They can restore lawful governance by forming a Reorganized State of California, as West Virginia did in 1861, when they separated from Virginia.

The State of New California

The State of New California was established by California patriots who are no longer willing to tolerate the tyranny of California's failed and corrupt government. By invoking Article IV, Section 4 of the United States Constitution, the people have asserted their right to form a new state. Every state admitted to the Union has followed a similar path to statehood, including the original colonies.

The State of New California is proceeding toward statehood to restore the republican form of government guaranteed by the Founders.

By starting with a clean slate, we can ensure that California never faces the debt crisis it currently has. We will achieve this through innovation, quality education, limited taxation, and unnecessary regulation. Our plan includes restoring water infrastructure to meet the needs of the population, unleashing our abundant energy resources, minimizing bureaucracy, and unlocking the full potential of our greatest asset: the American people.

The establishment of New California will revitalize both states as economic powerhouses by fostering a free market economy. This initiative will drive prosperity, stimulate business growth, and boost America's success.

THE ISLAND MODEL AND THE NEW CALIFORNIA STATE MAP STRATEGIC AND CONSTITUTIONAL FOUNDATIONS

by Malcolm McGough

The proposed New California State map adopts a unique geographic structure that mirrors the island-based administrative model of Hawaii. This structure, which isolates California's major metropolitan regions as 'islands' of the existing state within the larger territory of New California, is neither accidental nor unprecedented. It is a deliberate strategy that strengthens the constitutional and political argument for state division under Article IV, Section 3 of the U.S. Constitution.

1. Hawaii's Island-Based Political Geography

Hawaii's state structure provides a clear example of how geographically separated jurisdictions can operate coherently under a single state government. The Hawaiian archipelago consists of multiple islands, each functioning as an independent county: Honolulu (O'ahu), Maui County, Hawai'i County (Big Island), and Kaua'i County. These islands are separated by significant ocean distances, yet they maintain administrative unity and legal coherence.

Congressional districts and county lines in Hawaii follow natural separations such as ocean channels and topography, rather than artificial grids. This model demonstrates that non-contiguous political subdivisions are both practical and constitutionally viable within the United States.

2. Application to the New California Map

The New California State proposal applies a similar logic to the geography of California. Urban coastal regions—notably Los Angeles, the San Francisco Bay Area and Sacramento —are treated as 'California State islands,' surrounded by the proposed territory of New California. These metropolitan areas remain part of the existing state, while the inland and northern regions form the new state entity.

MARTHA WASHINGTON

Wife, mother, property owner, and the "First Lady" of the United States, Martha Washington was known for her personal strength, devotion to her husband, and patient resolve during and after the war.

In 1759, she married George Washington. She was about five feet tall and he stood over six feet and two inches, but she made up for her petite stature through her unflappable spirit.

SAMUEL ADAMS

Samuel Adams, born in Boston, Massachusetts, was a passionate and influential voice against British rule before and during the American Revolution. A second cousin of President John Adams, he played a major role in advancing the cause of independence.

Adams was a founding member of the Sons of Liberty, the group that famously organized the Boston Tea Party, destroying British tea in protest of new taxes.

BETSY ROSS

Betsy Ross is credited with stitching the first United States flag—a symbol of freedom, the marker of American identity, patriotism, and pride. She apprenticed under John Webster, becoming a skilled seamstress and upholsterer.

According to legend, General Washington visited her in the summer of 1776, and he showed her a sketch of a flag with thirteen red and white stripes and thirteen six-pointed stars, which she crafted into the first flag of the Union.

His work appeals to readers interested in constitutional history, political theory, and the origins of American governance.

Kathleen Goble is a writer, communication strategist, and co-author of Artificial Intelligence: The Fight for the Future of Humanity: Making the Case for a 28th Amendment, which explores the societal, legal, and ethical challenges of AI. Goble brings clarity and insight to complex issues by bridging technological innovation with ethical considerations and public discourse.

This arrangement avoids the legal and logistical difficulties of drawing borders through dense metropolitan sprawl. Instead, the boundaries follow natural geographical features—mountain ranges, deserts, and major transportation corridors—that already separate these regions functionally and politically.
